Option B

Prepare your stash

Set aside 6 sheets of cardstock, 6 patterned papers, 1 transparency, 2 book rings and a collection of mixed media embellishments, like buttons, paper clips, staples, gems, brads, fabric, ribbon, thread and stationery.

Option C

Grab and go

As long as you can say you have plenty of stash to hand and don't mind being a bit spontaneous, just wait for the cybercrop, download the class and grab stuff from your stash as you go. Totally fine.

CELEBRATE!

A LITTLE BIT OF EVERYTHING

GET READY TO SCRAP

Mixed Media means we're going to put lots of stuff together...some standard scrapbook supplies, some notions, some...other stuff.

PREPARING YOUR PHOTOGRAPHS

This book has a great deal of flexibility -- and that includes size, length and theme. Keep in mind that these are just recommendations and there is absolutely no right or wrong with this project. There is only having fun.

That said, I would suggest choosing at least 8 photos in advance to save you the panic of choosing the pictures and printing them during the cybercrop, when my luck would say I would run out of printer ink. Maybe your luck is better. The book can easily hold 8 to 24 pictures, so hopefully you can find a number in there that will work. They can all be 4x6 prints or some can be smaller (either printer smaller or just cropped as you go).

If you choose 24, for example, I would print 12 at 4x6, then have some fun with the sizes of the remaining 12, printing some at 2x3, some even smaller.

As far as themes go, pick something you would like to have a book about! Do you have 8 to 24 photos of a holiday you would like to scrap? Of your family? Of a birthday party? Of some friends over the years? Of your home or neighbourhood? Of yourself? Those are all fab. If you fancy something else, that's fine too.

You know what? Go to your photo library and pick some topic that you like. Find 8 to 24 pictures. Print them. Have a look at the stash notes. And then just relax until next weekend. All will be just fine!
